

Tavern at St. Michael's Square executive chef to offer presentation at Greeley Farmers' Market on Saturday

Greeley Tribune | June 4, 2015

The Weld County community health campaign Make TODAY Count! will host a cooking demonstration at the Greeley Farmers' Market on Saturday.

Executive Chef Chad Young from the Tavern at St. Michael's Square, 2918 67th Ave. in Greeley, will prepare two dishes from local produce, including mushroom ceviche and honey-glazed beets, according to a news release from the campaign.

The Farmers' Market is open from 7:30-noon, and is located at the Union Pacific Depot, 902 7th Ave.

Make TODAY Count! works with community partners to improve well-being, increase healthy eating, and increase active living. It is supported by a community benefit grant from Kaiser Permanente, and coordinated by the North Colorado Health Alliance.

For more about Make TODAY Count!, go to www.maketodaycount.org.